

Clarity of information for transport users – train company website assessment

Transport Focus wants to make sure transport users have the information they need to travel with confidence as the coronavirus lockdown is eased – or to choose not to.

We are pushing for information to be crystal clear on bus company, train company and motorway services websites. We're after clarity about – among other things – face covering rules, social distancing arrangements and whether hand-sanitiser is or isn't available. Our qualitative research and weekly Travel during Covid-19 survey show that these are things of concern to transport users. They are often the simple things that will give reassurance and let people set out knowing what to expect and what they need to do.

For rail passengers, we conducted an initial assessment of how clear information was on train company websites. The questions are set out below, which included a section about ticket refunds. We then worked with train companies to secure improvements. We carried out a second assessment on 23 June 2020 which led to further engagement with some companies.

The exercise has resulted in significant improvement. All train company websites are now providing clear information about the things we assessed. We thank the rail industry for its positive engagement to bring this about. It is a great example of the watchdogs helping companies to help their passengers.

For the record, you can see the findings of our 23 June second assessment after subsequent engagement with those train companies which had recorded red crosses. This covers the reassurance/confidence questions and another set about ticket refunds. Please note that they represent snapshots in time and will not be updated: if a train company makes subsequent changes to its website resulting in something no longer being clear it will not be reflected here.

How clear are train company websites about key passenger concerns as Britain emerges from lockdown?
